

Matt Beekman
Chief Technology Officer
HFA

Matthew Beekman is Chief Technology Officer of the Harry Fox Agency, Inc. (HFA). As CTO, Beekman is responsible for developing HFA's long-term technology and systems strategy in support of the Slingshot rights management service as well as HFA's core operations development. He also provides technical leadership in the creation of new products and services. Beekman reports directly to HFA President and CEO Michael Simon.

A seasoned technology leader, Beekman brings to HFA fourteen years of CTO experience from various media-based companies. Prior to joining HFA, Beekman was co-founder and CTO of Ticket Fusion, an internet-based live event ticketing platform that Beekman designed and launched. In his role as co-founder and CTO, he was responsible for all technology applications and infrastructure while crafting Ticket Fusion's overall business strategy. Before that, he was co-founder and CTO of Burn-One.com, a live recording platform for the remote capture of production quality audio and video in real-time. Beekman was also CTO of OnLine Voice Video & Data, where he developed the company's e-commerce platform for the direct sales and distribution of computer, video conferencing and telephone equipment.

Beekman has a Bachelor of Science degree in Physics from Boston College. He lives in New York City and is equally passionate about music and advances in technology, frequenting live music venues as well as tech meetups, conferences and seminars on new developments in areas of Big Data and machine learning.
